... Adventure is something you seek for pleasure, or even for profit, like a gold rush or invading a country; for the illusion of being more alive than ordinarily, the thing you will to occur; but experience is what really happens to you in the long run; the truth that finally overtakes you."

Dear Classmates:

Having had the pleasure to have known you these four years here at Stoughton High School, I can safely say I will, quite simply, remember one and all. But stepping from this formality, I would like to say thank you for allowing me to help our class, in its senior year to reach our goal of a successful and pleasant last year in school, here in Stoughton High.

As I think of all the times that have been so special to me, I ask you to do the same. Life's future is relatively unsure, some may continue schooling, some go on to the world of work, and some others will still take the options that life can offer them; but whatever the calling each will have or least one thing in common — part of their past. Memories of old friendships, fads, fun times, and fantasies remain as a certainty; and these things then remind us of how a brick building and four short years could change our entire lives.

We are the Class of 1983, and that fact makes us very unique. In my opinion, there will be no other class with as much class; so I wish you all the best of luck and health as you go on in life.

Stephen D. Alfano
President
1982-83

To Mr. Leonard Cidodo,

The Class of 1983 would like to express special gratitude to you, for the past four years, your guidance has influenced our growth as individuals and as a class.

We appreciate the time you have spent with us, your dedication and involvement in our activities . . .

Cid, You have earned our thanks.
On behalf of '83

To the class of 1983:

I cannot begin to tell how deeply happy I am to have been your advisor for the past four years.

The memories we have shared and the great times we have had will be cherished for many years to come.

The friendships we have made will continue to grow and the memories will always be there.

Best wishes always,
Leonard Cidodo

But still, life goes on and the universe is one.
We are all of the same beam of life.

In Memoriam

DEDICATION: With a feeling of sorrow and regret, the editors and staff of the STOTONIAN dedicate the Senior Section of the 1983 yearbook to the memory of DAVID WEEKS, so tragically and accidentally struck down in the fall of our senior year as he stood on the threshold of his youth . . .

We mourn the loss of a friend, a classmate, and a teammate. May this page keep David's memory alive for as long as this book keeps alive our memories of our school days and our schoolmates.

THE LAST SHOT

Dovid had o shut out going
Throughout his fine young life
Till the Lord put one behind him
On that rainy, rainy night

Dovid crouched low to block the shot
But this was one he could not stop
The Lord's shot was occurote ond true
And despite Dovid's last effort
Found its way through.

Dovid poised ond confident
Got set for the next shot
But there was no time left on the clock
Why am I stonding here oll olone
With oll my friends or home

Mom, Dod
Why is everyone here
On this cool cleor doy
With teors in their eyes
And with such dismooy
The Lord colled Dovid, Dovid
With a voice from ofor
Come with me to heaven
My NUMBER "ONE ALL STAR"

Gordon L. Gillard
A former hockey ployer ond Dovid's Uncle

To an Athlete Dying Young

The time you won your town the roce
We choired you through the market-place;
Mon ond boy stood cheering by,
And home we brought you shoulder-high.

Today, the rood oll runners come,
Shoulder-high we bring you home,
And set you or your threshold down,
Townsmen of o stiller town.

Smart lod, to slip betimes owoy
From fields where glory does not stoy
And eorly though the lourel grows
It withers quicker thon the rose.

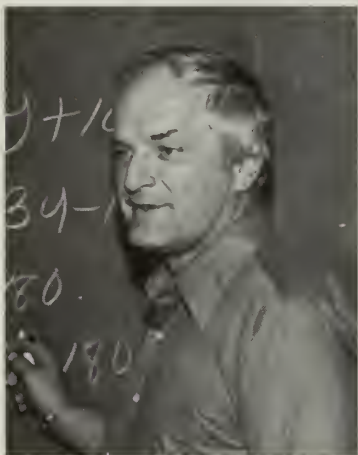

Even the shady night has shut
Cannot see the record cut,
And silence sounds no worse thon cheers
After eorh has stopped the eors.

Now you will not swell the rout
of lods thot wore their honors out,
Runners whom renown outron
And the nome died before the mon.

Mr. Anthony Sarno
Principal

Mr. Anthony Sarno was named Stoughton High's thirty-first principal in November, 1982. Sarno had served as a science teacher at SHS since 1964. He also was a Driver-ed instructor and Student Council advisor for many years. The new principal previously served as an Administrative Intern for the Stoughton public schools for two years before being named the assistant principal of SHS in 1980. During his 18 years as an instructor, he designed and taught three new courses: Modern Science, Health, and Microbiology. He is a 1964 graduate of Bridgewater State where he earned a B.S. degree in education. He also earned a Master's Degree in administration from Northeastern University in 1968. Mr. Sarno's strength has always been the excellent rapport which he has enjoyed with students. The Class of 1983 welcomes "Tany" Sarno with sincere best wishes for years in which he will be able to build a positive relationship with students and staff and that he will continue to promote mutual respect and cooperation between all those involved in the school.

Mr. Albert Twamey

Mr. Albert J. "Tuck" Twamey retired in the fall of 1982 after more than 30 years in the school system. Mr. Twamey taught at Staughton High for many years, and holds the record for most wins as football coach; after moving to the junior high as assistant principal, he came back to SHS as Dean of Students, and served as interim principal in 1979-80. His most recent position was assistant to the superintendent.

Greetings

TO THE CLASS OF 1983:

Congratulations upon the successful completion of your high school career. Graduation marks the fulfillment of one of many goals you will set for yourself throughout your lifetime. The knowledge gained at Staughton High School will be a major factor in completing future goals that you set for yourself.

The Class of 1983 is the last class I taught as a classroom teacher and my first class as Principal of Staughton High School. We have been directly involved in many changes over the last four years. Your cooperation during this period has been tremendous. I thank you for your support and understanding.

Your parents and teachers should also be congratulated. Their unselfish dedication and support over the last four years are directly responsible for this most treasured occasion.

In closing, may I extend to each graduate my sincerest wish for your future success and happiness.

Sincerely,
Anthony L. Sarna, Jr.
Principal
Staughton High School

To the Class of 1983:

The Class of 1983 has distinguished itself in many ways. As seniors, you have set a high standard of excellence in all your school activities. Your outstanding performance in academic undertakings has been noted by the fact that so many of you are going to attend the finest institutions of higher learning. We are pleased that you have chosen to further your education in both four and two-year college programs. Many of you have taken advantage of the programs that will assist you in securing employment in technical fields by completing courses in computer science and in business related skills such as word processing. You are better trained than any previous class to cope with the demands of our technological society.

We are equally proud of your social and athletic contribution to the school and to the community. During the most difficult times, financially and economically, you have assisted by giving generously of your time and effort to raise funds for the important extracurricular programs such as those in athletics and in music. You have been successful, and we thank you.

May I take this opportunity to wish each and every one of you the very best in the years ahead. Your family, your friends and your school are very proud of you.

As Superintendent of Schools, I am sincerely happy to share this senior year and your graduation with you. Please feel free to come by to see me at any time.

Sincerely
John G. Murray, Ed.D.
Superintendent of Schools

To the Class of 1983:

Please accept the congratulations of the School Committee as you complete your high school years in Staughton.

Those in charge of your high school education have had prime responsibility for your intellectual and social formulation during these years.

Together with your parents and your churches, these same educators have shared responsibility for your more important moral formulation.

We hope that — as you look back on your high school years — you will find that we have all measured up to our responsibilities in helping you to become better persons.

Go forward now with all of our good wishes.

For the Committee,
John F. Dacey, Jr.

Dedication

The Dedication page is very important because it reflects the attitudes and feelings of seniors during their final year of high school. This year the Stoughton staff distributed surveys to seniors in order to receive their nominations for the dedication. After careful consideration, the staff decided that the 1983 Stoughton should be jointly dedicated to two individuals and one group.

• To Mr. Kevin McCormick because "he has done something for everyone and he is always more than willing to help in any way he can."

• To Mr. Anthony Sarno, in his first year as principal of SHS, for "proving that students and adults can get along with mutual respect" and for the "confidence and understanding he has shown to the students of SHS."

• To the SHS varsity football team who brought back a winning tradition to Stoughton by beating Canton on Thanksgiving Day after seven long years of losses, and for the hope that we will continue winning.

It is to these three that we sincerely dedicate the 1983 Stoughton.

FOOTBALL

A victory over Conton ended a seven-year drought and made for a happy finish to an otherwise disappointing season in which the Knights ended up in 6th place with a 3-5-1 record. Despite fine effort, the team was winless in its first four games tying OA 6-6. They closed with wins over King Philip and Sharon. Highlights were near upsets over powerhouse North Attleboro and (superbowl-baund) Franklin. All-stars were Larry Smith, a power on offense; and Darin Jordan and Ed Sheehan, defensive stalwarts. Pete Carram took over for an injured Jim Overstreet at the midpoint and quarterbacked the team to its final three wins.

Soccer

The varsity soccer team was, once again, one of the shining stars in the SHS athletic picture, as it advanced to the final round of the MIAA tournament. The Captains, Joe Serpa and Steve Alfano, were leaders of a total team effort which resulted in an 8-3-2 season. John Amaral compiled a 14-goal effort. Soccer should continue as Stoughton's top sport for several years; many on the varsity are returning, and the sub-varsity also did well with an 8-2-1 record.

Halloween Dance Spirit Rally

Halloween 1982 proved to be an exciting event as the class of '83 held the second annual Halloween Dance. The dance, the most successful in many years, hosted a variety of interesting characters. Students donned costumes from bunnies to punk-rockers to crayons.

Other major fall events included student competitions. At the annual Thanksgiving Day spirit rally, sophomores Tara Donnelly, president, and Kim Betts, vice-president, lost their appetites after they each devoured a blueberry pie to win the pie-eating contest and earn "Battle of the Classes" points!

The rally participants were also overwrought with anxiety before the juniors were named winners of the Spirit Hall Contest for the second consecutive year. Their hall, entitled, "Knights on Broadway," featured the "stars" of '84.

Golf

The golf team finished with a 6-9-2 record, falling short of pre-season expectations. A midseason slump put them out of contention for the title but a strong finish provides hope for next year. SHS had a young team, built around three outstanding veterans: Keith LaPorte, who lost only three times, Poul Meskonis, and Ed DiStefano. One bright spot for the kids who like golf is that many of the area schools are returning golf to their athletic programs after cutting them out because of the money crunch.

Year-old Jamie Fiske's successful liver transplant headlines much of the news in November. Donna DiMatteo is crowned Homecoming Queen. SAT's Senior Sketti Supper. Anthony Sarna is named principal of SHS. Senior girls from Canton and Straughton battle in the Powderpuff Football Game. Vietnam Veterans Memorial is unveiled in Washington, D.C. on Veterans Day. NFL players end 9-week strike. JV field hockey goes undefeated into last game and varsity soccer makes it into tournament for 4th straight year. Gov. Mike Dukakis, the "Bartle Bill," and the Death Penalty among major election winners. Nationally, Republicans kept control of the Senate and lost no more House seats than expected but Reagan's "stay the course" message is challenged as Democrats gain more positions. "Battle of the Classes" points are picked up as Juniors win Spirit Hall Contest, Sophomores win Pie-Eating Contest, and Freshmen show most spirit at a Majorette Dance. Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev dies and Yuri Andropov, former KGB head, is named his successor. Sugar Ray Leonard retires as world welterweight champ boxing. The leadership of Capt. The harriers roared to a 5-1 start, but fell back in league standings with two heartbreaking losses. In a crucial meet against North Attleboro for first place, the Knights lost by a mere three points. FIELD HOCKEY

Varsity field hockey's disappointing 3-11-1 record is deceiving because the girls were never really defeated badly. The team dominated most of its games, only to be beaten by goals scored in the late going in nearly every contest. Despite inexperience on the team (8 of the 11 starters were either freshmen or sophomores) the team managed to spring an upset by beating King Phillip and just lost to league-leading Mansfield 1-0. Top scorer on the team was freshman Sheila Jackman. Co-captains Debbie Swartz and Patty Quattrucci were spirited team leaders. The sub-varsity lost only one game all year.

Look out Conton, here come the powder puffs of 1983.

Well girls, what's next?

Boys will be boys (with a few exceptions).

Led by coach Paul Freeman, Saughtan High's Senior Class was well represented as "our girls" played Conton's senior girls in the semi-annual powderpuff football game.

Karen O'Neill was in the driver's seat for Saughtan, and played a fine game as quarterback. Stephanie Ciulla also had a great game, both on defense and on offense. Yet, even with many Conton turnovers, including a Kris Cody interception, the Knights were unable to put points on the board as they were defeated 6-0 in a rough, brutal battle.

Despite the loss, it was a day of excitement and entertainment for all, and a great money-maker for the class of 1983, which profited over $500 from the game.

Fiddler on the Roof, starring Jim Day (Tevye) and Cheryl Klim (Gaalde) was a great success at SHS. The acting and scenery were both superb adaptations of the long running Broadway musical. The well-organized musical numbers included "Matchmaker, Matchmaker," "If I Were a Rich Man," and "Sunrise, Sunset." Mrs. Linda Dolan both choreographed and directed the entire show, aided by student director Jessica Kerwin, choral advisor Marylis Aiken, Clifford Campbell, and Robert Dalan.

Finishing second in an extremely close league race, the Knights drew Newton South in the opening round and lost to a team which finally won the tournament. The team suffered some close losses at the beginning, forcing them to play catch-up for the remainder of the year. All-stars Larry Smith and Jim Overstreet did the majority of the clutch scoring, but most victories were the results of a total team effort, a team talented and rich at nearly every position and boasting deep bench strength. Hockey

This year, the SHS varsity hackey team had a tough and very competitive season. They placed third in the league, right behind super-powers Canton and Franklin (which eventually won Div. II state honors). The offense was mostly run by three seniors, John Murray, Richard Dray and Mike Bousquet, all third year veterans. The trio totalled 83 points, each getting over 25. The defense was ruled by underclassmen Scott McKenzie, John Dauthy, Tim Bishop, and Tany Novella. These four players will be the backbone for next year's team. The goal tending was split between senior Wayne Aranson and Craig LaParte, each of whom came through, playing under the added burden of replacing veteran goaltender Dave Weeks, who, sadly, was killed in an accident just prior to the start of the season.

The varsity hockey team dedicated the 1982-83 season to the memory of David Weeks. They didn't win the league title for Dave, but they tried and worked hard to the best of their talent, never quitting, in the same manner as he would have done.

GYMNASTICS

Jodi Roseman was the only senior on a small (in numbers) gymnastics team which performed in relative obscurity. After a couple of years in which it appeared that gymnastics was growing in quantity and quality, the team "slipped back" to a disappointing 0-9 season. The future can only be "up," that is, if the girls really want the sport enough to demand improvements.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS

Students Against Driving Drunk (SADD) held an informational assembly for students in Dec. Guest speakers included Robert Anastas, the originator of SADD, and Alda Lombardi, Canton High's SADD advisor.

"Foods to Go" was one of 1983's new programs. Mrs. Ellen Griffin (Home-Ec) supervised students as they prepared food for sale. Specials of the week included cranberry relish, homemade pizza, and a variety of cookies.

Anthony Sarno was named SHS's 31st principal in Nov. 1982. To congratulate him, the Student Council, in conjunction with the four class executive boards, held a reception. Students, faculty, and parents formally welcomed Sarno to his new position.

Students listen carefully to good advice; "Don't Drive Drunk."

Stonian

Michael Small Business Manager

Traditions are the cornerstone of our society. They bring people together and create longlasting memories. Yearbooks are such a tradition and the people who work on them are well aware of their value. As editor-in-chief, I have been honored to become part of this long-standing tradition and I have worked to make it the best it could possibly be. But I am not solely responsible for this book. There were many people who helped with all aspects of our production and there are a few who especially deserve credit for their dedication and hard work.

• Allison Barry who worked persistently to lay out, coordinate, and arrange our senior section. • Jo Ann Davis who served as a liaison between our staff and the word processing classes who quickly and accurately typed our materials for production. Word Processing also made it possible for us to keep track of all write-ups which eased that usually complicated process. • Finally, my most valuable asset, Michael Small. Michael not only sold ads, books, and kept the business end of the book under control, but he also helped with design and layout when he was most needed. Mike is also responsible, along with the advertising staff, for selling 34 pages of ads to provide us with the funds for an additional 16 pages for our book. This is the largest Stonian since 1973.

Another man who deserves thanks for his help on the book is Mr. Sumner Topper. Mr. Topper was both a friend and an advisor to me during the most hectic days of production. He gave me support and guidance when I most needed it and the entire staff appreciated his encouragement and humor.

I am proud of these people and the entire Stonian staff and I am even more proud of the yearbook we created together.

Last September I was reluctant to accept the appointment as business manager of the 1983 Stonian. This year's business staff was one of the smallest in Stonian history, and I wondered how 15 people were going to accomplish the work usually tackled by 25 or more.

Well not only did all of the necessary work get done, but the majority of it was accomplished by a group of nine outstanding individuals:

Many thanks to Debbie Carter for her superior sales work, Fred Minsker for his help in selling advertisements over the summer, Bob Francis and Jane Fidler for their tedious and never-ending secretarial assistance, JoAnn Davis for single-handedly keeping track of the word processing materials, Risa Marcus and Sheila Keen for organizing and running the financial end of the book, and of course John Beaton for his ever-popular, and unfortunately daily, yearbook announcements.

There is one individual whom I have not yet mentioned. Without the help of this one person, the business staff surely would not have become as strong, active and successful. Sophomore Joe Waters has done more work on and for the 1983 yearbook staff than most of the senior staff members combined. Special thanks should go to him.

We've done what I knew we could do; that is, to publish not only the biggest, but one of the best yearbooks in Stonian history. This alone is due to the hard work and endless dedication of Kristin Cody, our editor, and Mr. Topper, our advisor. I know they would appreciate your comments regarding this book, so please feel free to express any you may have.

BLACK KNIGHT CAFE

For years, society refused to help much of its younger population, because in some ways they were "exceptional." Fortunately, recognition that they could fulfill active roles has finally come, first in Massachusetts and then in the nation. At Straughton, we are lucky to have an active, well-rounded special education program. This past year, the program was expanded. The Black Knight Cafe, operating on a bi-weekly basis, served hearty lunches to members of the faculty. The young students did such a good job in running the cafe that Baston's Channel 7 thought it worthy to give them a feature over television. The vocational program, which supplements the academic curriculum, has been expanded so that in the two weeks the students are not receiving food preparation training they are being taught building maintenance skills. In all programs, they are learning skills that will prepare them for possible future occupations and to assist them in functional living skills. The friendly response of both teachers and fellow students has been tremendous in enhancing their self-esteem.

The Pursuit of Ca$h

Most of the student body at SHS pursued part-time jobs this year. For most, they were necessary to enjoy a few of the comforts that high school students have become accustomed to. Some worked small ten-hour weeks with enough spending money to get by, while others labored through tedious 30-hour weeks to save for things such as college, the future, or, of course, their social life. Some obtained jobs for the experience; others tackled the things that they knew best. Working for the high school student has become a regular activity.

The minimum wage, which most students earned, was still $3.35 per hour despite rising demands by politicians for a lower teenage minimum wage.

SPECIAL SALUTE TO... the two seniors, four juniors, and one sophomore who were responsible in getting out this edition of the Senior Finale in ONE WEEK. They are Kria Cody and Mike Small, seniors; Dan Aronson, Paul Masalsky, Craig Spurr, Larry Yarmaloff, juniors; Ellie Havlin, sophomore.

The Cover

The editors and staff of both the SHS Knight and Senior Finale wish to artistically remember one of 1983's most interesting contests. As depicted in our cover illustration, seniors Debbie Swartz and Chrissy Kelleher were engaged in a private battle throughout most of their senior year. The contest? Well, it was based on which of the two would get their picture printed in the yearbook the most times (We don't know all the details.), and the winner? Well, we'll let Debbie and Chrissy figure that out!

FAREWELL TO '83

Eighteen.

Suddenly childhood days are over, perhaps too soon. The carefree, cheerful moments of high school are fading into mere memories. As each minute of the final year ticks away, the senior only begins to descry the future in the distance.

Graduation.

The time is at hand, the decision is imminent. Cast into the real world without warning, the high school graduate must leave his adolescence behind to depart on the rough road toward prosperity on his own. It's time to decide.

What is he going to do with his life?

"Just give me more time to think! I'm too young, I'm not ready to set out on my own," he pleads. Nevertheless, it is time to break from the watchful arms of parents into a world where the high school graduate must be entrusted into his own care. It is time to make a career choice.

Consider self-pleasure, environment, fame and money. The elaborate list of information provided by counselors, colleges, parents and friends filter through the graduate's mind. The pressure can confuse a young man or woman, forcing him to make his career choice based on the criteria of others. Often his own objectives are lost in the confusion.

This is the dilemma facing thousands of young people today. One of my friends spent his childhood days dreaming of clashing sticks and screeching skates lighting up the ice while thousands of fans applauded his game-winning goal. He loved to skate circles around his buddies on the pond at the end of the street. My friend's father was an accountant who wanted his son to follow in his footsteps, while his mother wanted him to work toward a high-paying job. My friend reluctantly attended accounting school, and easily found a job with a prospective company. Today he's retired, rich and unhappy. His life is nearly over, and his dream will never come true.

In his song "Subdivisions," Neil Peart speaks of these childhood dreams, most of which do not come true because the young adult has allowed today's world to determine his future. Peart profiles the people who have allowed money or the wishes of others to interfere with their career dreams. He says: "Growing up, it all seems so one-sided, opinions all provided, the future pre-decided-detached and sub-divided in the mass production zone. Nowhere is the dreamer or the misfit so alone. Subdivisions—in the high school halls—conform or be cast out. Any escape might help to soothe the unattractive truth—but the suburbs have no charms to soothe the restless dreams of youth."

Peart's "suburbs" are the places where career dreams cannot come true because a young student's future is "pre-decided." He urges young people to enter his "city" where desire and hope makes a dream become a reality, whatever that dream may be.

The graduates of Stoughton High in 1983 are urged to do the same. Ken Kalen will attend UMass next year, hopefully to major in music, one of his two true loves. Mark Repucci will pursue his career dream as a veterinary student, while Jodi Roseman will attend Mount Ida in her quest for success. Darin Jordan and Larry Smith will take their football talents to Northeastern next year, Dave Fogarty and Paul Guiney will bring their academic excellence to Boston College. Johnny Loughnane will attend Holy Cross, Jim Day will probably attend Emerson, Kris Cody will travel to Bucknell. Many graduates will enter the business world. Some graduates are still undecided.

1983 graduates: choose free will. Enter the "city" where your future dreams can come true. Don't let anyone else tell you what your objectives should be; set your own guidelines and demand of yourself. Do what you want to do, and turn your dreams into realities. For when your life is over, you won't want to look back in time and say:

"What did I do?"

ART EXHIBIT

During Stoughton High's Youth Art Month five students were handed blue ribbons for their outstanding work in this elective.

The Stoughton Art Association selected five pieces of student art from the exhibit in the school library. These works were displayed at the local association show at the public library during the last week of April.

The students who were awarded these ribbons were senior Scott Mellyn and juniors Francis Wesley, Greg Mahoney, Brian Plunkett and Peter Schieffer.

The first annual exhibit showing the talents of SHS art students and featuring some of the graduates who have gone off to college and industrial art success was an outstanding success. Some of the students even sold pieces of art.

SPORTS UPDATE

When Stoughton High enters its spring sports season, it's encouraging to know that many of the teams will continue on to post-season play. However, tournament action cannot provide the excitement of late-season battles for the Hockomock League title, which have involved three varsity squads this year.

The Baseball, Boys' Tennis and Girls' Tennis teams will each qualify for tourney play in 1983. At this time, however, the championship status of two of these teams is unknown, although the regular season game schedule has been completed. The baseball team, at 14-6, could end up in a first place tie depending upon the outcome of another contest. Boys' tennis, at 13-2, also must wait while two other teams determine Stoughton's fate.

In other sports action, the Boys' Track squad improved to 3-5, paced by the leadership of Captain Dave Jordan. Softball and Girls' Track each finished with disappointing seasons despite the strong efforts of a lauded few.

"My goal was just to hold the team together and keep them healthy," said Coach Russell Clough of the Girls' Tennis team, which will probably capture its second straight league title after the completion of two postponed matches. Clough looks to team togetherness as their success story in a sport in which individual efforts often overshadow a team endeavor.

"The girls get along exceptionally well, and there are no egos involved. Our strong point is our depth—we have top notch players in positions where others are weak," remarked Clough. Maura Tector and Maureen McGowan are each undefeated at singles while Sue Blomstrom anchors the squad at first singles. Diane Blomstrom and Tina Galley are undefeated at first doubles, and Carole Zelbow with Patty McGowan have suffered only one loss at second doubles.

Reverse the baseball team's 6-14 record of last year and anyone can see what a fine job Coach Bob Ashley did in bringing his team out of the cellar to the top of the league.

The championship was there for the taking, but the Knights unfortunately fell to Franklin in the final regular season game, 5-0.

"We worked hard to stay in first (place) for the majority of the season, but a championship is something you have to take and we simply didn't do it," commented Ashley. "We had our chances, but two losses to Canton really hurt us."

The solid pitching of Ed Statkiewicz and Jim Overstreet provided for several early season victories, but later the reliable Black Knight defense began to break down behind them and opposing hitters began breaking the Stoughton pitching ice. Overstreet finished at 5-3 with a 1.94 ERA, and Statkiewicz completed a fine season at 8-2 with a 1.16 ERA.

In the hitting department, Overstreet and Statkiewicz slugged their way into the top four with .382 and .373 averages respectively. Dave Murphy clouted 3 home runs while picking up 18 RBI's, and Tim Bishop came on strongly at the season's end to finish at a .343 clip. Dave Suslowicz and John Murray were the team's defensive stars.

When Don Bernier was initiated as Boys' Track coach, he did not set his sights on a league championship, but rather he wished to improve the performance of each of his team members. The squad "Everyone all the way down to the slowest kid gave one hundred percent to the team."

Captain Dave Jordan was a frequent tri-winner in the high hurdles, 880 and the high jump. Brian Plunkett posted an undefeated record in the low hurdles, Brian Larner is a hot freshman prospect in the

MARCH

This cold and rainy month began royally when Great Britain's Queen Elizabeth II arrived in San Diego, CA for a 10-day visit to the West Coast... other travelers included Pope Paul John II who visited seven countries in Central America bringing a message of peace to his followers; and two top EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) officials who traveled to new jobs when President Reagan replaced them with new deputies beginning a "cleanup" of that organization... Judy Thomas '83 placed first in SHS's annual Science Fair for the second year in a row while Richard Pinkofsky '84 placed second; both continued onto the State Fair in April... Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker turned pro as the new United States Football League (USFL) captured his attention with a $16 million contract... SHS Sophomores held the "Last Dance" of the year to say farewell to seniors.

100 and 200, and Barry Jennings overcame injuries to excel at the pole vault. John Cangeme was an effective javelin hurler came out on the short end of several closely contested meets in a competitive Hockomock League.

"I just wanted the kids to do the best they could do," commented Bernier. and Ed Daly threw a first place discus in several meets.

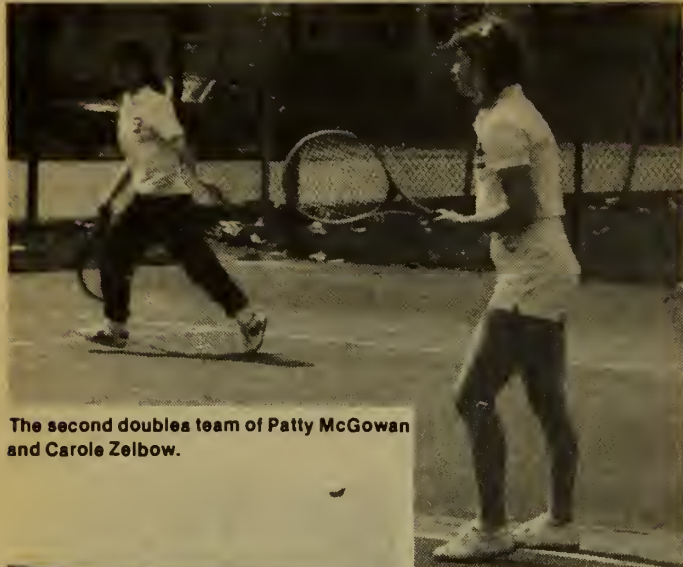

The Girls' Softball squad clawed to a dismal 1-13 mark, in a season which was hampered by player desertion. Despite the poor outcome, the team will send Sheila Jackman, Stephanie Ostis, Linda Pellegrino, and Dawn Young to the Hockomock League All-Star game.

The Boys' Tennis squad was riding high after a win over Sharon propelled them into a first place tie. Soon afterward, however, the Knights dropped a close decision to Foxboro and now wait for a verdict in the Foxboro-Sharon contest in hopes of capturing a tri-championship.

Andy Berler lost only one match at first singles throughout the season, while brother Scott posted an undefeated record. The addition of Boo Stevens, Bill Rossi and Joel Koltz was extremely profitable, and the first doubles team of Stork Aronson and Capt. "E" Hoffman was brilliant as usual.

When Coach Lynn Bachman wasn't cooking burgers, he was coaching the Girls' Track team which was hampered by lack of depth. Bachman will welcome several young prospects back to the roster next season including Kim Romaine, Paula Klim, Stacy Green and Stacey Berdos.

Capt. Sue Blomstrom rips a back hand.

Last season the girls' tennis squad made an astounding turnaround from an 0-16 record to a perfect 16-0 mark. This year a closely knit squad of talented athletes carried on in that winning tradition by coasting past the entire Hockomock League, suffering only one loss to King Philip. The team is comprised entirely of underclassmen who exhibit a rare maturity and professionalism in their winning ways. Coach Russ Clough can look forward to a successful finish in 1983 as well as continued success in the future.

The boys' tennis team finished the season with a 14-2 record and a share of first place in the Hockomock League with Foxboro and Sharon. The team got off to a flying start with a 10-1 record, losing only to Sharon. A loss to Foxboro later in the season was the only other setback they would encounter.

All-Star and team MVP Andy Berler lost only one match while picking up one default. His brother, Scott Berler, also lost only once and reached the semifinals in the State Tournament. Junior third singles player Russ Stevens was a welcome addition to the squad. He compiled an impressive 10-3 mark which included a clutch victory against Foxboro.

Junior Capt. Eric Hoffman, with Dan Aronson at first doubles provided consistent play throughout the year. Joel Koltz and Bill Rossi lived up to high expectations at second doubles and Craig Spurr and Lance Levy filled in well in substitute roles when needed.

The tennis team will be competing in the State Championships in June and with a group of fine young prospects next season should be another championship year.

The first doubles team of Dan Aronson and Capt. Eric Hoffman prepare to return serve.

APRIL

April showers may have caused flooding in many southern states, but they did not affect the spirits of many SHS students. The first event was the Music Department's Pops Concert, back after its 1982 cancellation, and hundreds of people were entertained by SHS musical talent... male beauties paraded themselves before screaming audiences in the first Male Beauty Contest in which Mark Reppucci was named "Our Knight in Shining Armor"... the largest Disneyland in the world opened in Tokyo greeted by millions of fans... the Bruins went all the way to the Stanley Cup Semi-finals before they were beaten by a determined NY Islanders squad; the Islanders went on to win their fourth consecutive Stanley Cup... more SHS talent was displayed when students, both present and past, exhibited their artwork in the library... Joan Benoit won the 1983 Boston Marathon's Woman's title, beating the former woman's world marathon record by over 10 seconds; Greg Myer took the men's title... students practiced their understanding of government by participating in both the Interscholastic Model Senate and the Stoughton Jaycee-sponsored Student Government Day... the Celtics were beaten by Milwaukee in the NBA playoffs.

Moving out as the "day of days" is here.

Principel Sarno, Superintendent Murray, and School Committeeman Joseph Harrington gather to make sure that Mike Small is getting out (and staying out?).

Jim Burley received traditional congratulations from Mrs. Rosane Molineri of the School Committee...

While Leonard Johnson receives warmer congratulations...

And waiting for their congratulations are Paule Werkowski and Julie Wenzel.

Thoughts while waiting for that final moment to start: "We will now have a moment of meditation... P. A. announcements... Report to the attendance office... Students of the following teachers will report to the commons... Sessions today are in Room... And here is Sports Update... A mandatory meeting will be held..."

INTRAMURAL WRITING COMPETITION FINALISTS:

Cassie

April paced back and forth over the freshly waxed floor tile, staring at the elevator door. She extinguished the cigarette she had just lit a moment before into a standing ashtray. Right above the ashtray was the "up" button to the elevator, which she was tempted to press, until her husband slipped his arm into hers, leading her to a spot by the fire extinguisher, and directly below an intercom system.

"Don't worry, April—she's coming down soon."

A robot-like voice shook the speaker and startled April.

"Dr. Mescowitz to psychiatric. Dr. Mescowitz to psychiatric."

April laughed nervously. "You know, Frank, I'll bet that girl is a computer." She looked at the speaker. "They're all computers in here. Robots. Uncaring robots." She looked down the hall to see a small child in white in a wheelchair being guided down the corridor by a well-kept doctor. They were followed by a brisk, efficient nurse carrying antiseptics. The whole thing seemed terribly unclear to April. Her eyes followed the three figures as she spoke.

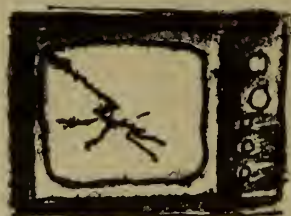

"I found a picture of her, Frank."

"Of Cassie. I was looking through her school papers and I found a picture of her—on the balance beam. She'll be a terrific gymnast. Don't you think so? I could never do half the things she does—all those cartwheels and handstands... She was going to try out for the gymnastics team at school before... the accident."

Frank drew closer to April. He could feel her heart pumping, and he saw a faint quiver in her lips. He thought of Cassie. She was tall for a girl of fifteen, or more likely sixteen. He wasn't really sure of her age. He looked at April. He finally noticed the wrinkles that she had constantly been complaining about.

April sighed. "She was the prettiest girl in her class."

"She looks just like her mother," Frank replied. April and Cassie looked nothing alike.

"Oh, Frank, where is she? It's been eight minutes. Surely it doesn't take eight minutes to go up one flight and bring a girl down—Dr. Austin said he'd—"

She stopped abruptly as the elevator door began to open. She walked rapidly toward it as a stout, important-looking man in a doctor's coat came off the elevator and slowly walked toward the couple.

April demanded, "Dr. Austin, where's Cassie? You said you'd bring her down to—"

Dr. Austin said patiently, "I know. I'd forgotten that she was in therapy with Dr. Rivers. She'll be down shortly. Now you just relax and—"

"Dr. Austin, Cassie's coming home with us. Today."

"Now, Mrs. Wagner, we've been over this before. Cassie isn't in any condition to leave the hospital."

"I've seen her. She's fine."

"You know what I mean. She's under great emotional stress. We've kept her under observation and run some tests to—"

"We are not paying six-hundred dollars a week for you to 'observe' her and 'run tests.' The truth is, you haven't done a thing for her, and are too damned scared to admit it. She'd be much more comfortable at home than in this morgue."

Frank took her hand. "Darling, maybe you should—"

"Don't lecture me. We've tried it your way and it hasn't worked. My baby is coming home."

Dr. Austin cleared his throat uneasily. "Mrs. Wagner, Cassie has been through severe trauma. She lost her best friend in that car accident. Now that is very difficult for a sixteen-year-old to accept. Taking her home won't cure her."

"Keeping her here won't help either."

Frank turned to her. "April, you've got to—"

"And you! You're the one who let her go out that night in the first place! Do you realize that this would never have happened if—" April stopped in midstream. She cupped her hands over her eyes as Frank embraced her.

"Doctor," Frank asked, "what do you think we should do?"

Dr. Austin paused. "Dr. Rivers and I both feel that your daughter will be much better off in Lakeview than here in Faulkner Memorial. They have treatment centers there that—"

Frank interrupted, "How long do you think it would take to—"

"About six months, I'd say. However, the cost would be—"

"The money means nothing."

"Of course, the decision is yours. You could still bring Cassie home."

Frank turned confidentially to April. "Honey, you know Cassie needs help."

"But we can help her, Frank. I can help her."

"April, this isn't like teaching her how to do cartwheels. She has got to learn how to cope."

"I know, but... I love her, Frank."

"So do I. We must do it for her."

"Frank—if Cassie... seems to be all right, can she come back to us?"

"April, dear, I... you know—"

"I can't lose my baby, Frank. I just can't lose... my... baby..." April's voice trailed off as the elevator door opened and Cassie walked out with Dr. Rivers. Cassie was a tall, plain, blonde-haired girl. Dr. Rivers had very little hair, which he pulled over to one side in a desperate attempt to hide a bald spot. April ran to Cassie.

"Cassie! My baby!"

"Hello, Mother."

"You look beautiful."

"Thanks. How are you?"

"Just fine. Oh, how I've been dying to see you. I know the—accident—has been hard on you..."

"I don't want to talk about it."

"I understand. You've been through so much. I'm so sorry about Jackie. Her parents were—"

"I said I don't want to talk about it."

April smiled and held Cassie. "I know, dear. I'm sorry."

Frank stood behind April. "I hear you haven't been eating very much, Cassie."

"I'm not hungry."

Frank squeezed April's waist. "Pretty soon you'll be skinnier than your mother."

Cassie said irritably, "I'm just not that hungry."

April hugged Cassie. "Stop badgering the poor girl. Cassie, would you like to come shopping with me sometime soon—next Saturday, maybe?"

"I'm not going anywhere in a car."

April frowned. "You mean you don't want to buy any new clothes? I can't believe my ears. Very well, we'll go by foot."

The two doctors consulted with each other under the speaker as the voice came blaring through the corridor again.

"Dr. Mescowitz to psychiatric, please. Dr. Mescowitz to psychiatric."

"I've heard you've done some drawings this week," Frank said to Cassie. "Can I see them sometime?"

"Sometime."

Cassie walked over to a picture of a rose and examined it. Dr. Austin approached Frank and April and spoke so that Cassie couldn't hear.

"Mr. and Mrs. Wagner, have you reached your decision?"

April looked at Cassie. She loved that girl. She could help her. But she wanted what was best for her. Could six months at Lakeview really help? She felt torn apart inside. She looked at the speaker as if it could help her in her decision, or interrupt her once more so she could delay her reply. She pulled back her hair until it began to hurt her scalp. She looked at her husband and then down on the floor. Her eyes rose and she looked once more at Cassie. This time she spoke.

"Pack your things, Cassie. You're coming home."

The Hunter

The hunter emerged from his Cadillac, neglecting to turn the lights off. Dawn was breaking on a frigid November morning. The icy air bit at his face with teeth of stone, but the hunter knew if he could overcome the bitter cold an abundance of deer were waiting in the forest, waiting to fall at the mercy of his powerful trigger.

He crept among the green pines, beginning his mapped trek into the mountains from the parking area built by the axes of men. He was clothed in a wool coat and leather boots, on his head was a coonskin cap, and in his hands was a double-barrel shotgun he had just polished. The hunter left his tuna sandwich and potato chips in the car, but he took along a thermos of hot coffee his daughter had graciously brewed up. The hunter's son had begged him endlessly to take part in the hunt, but the trip would be dangerous. His son stayed at home.

His wife left him alone three months ago. He returned from a hunting trip late one evening and she was gone. A note was left on the kitchen table saying, "Too many late nights at the office." The kids cried for days, but the hunter was strong. He merely loiters at the local bar a little longer now. His daughter makes his coffee.

The steel shank of his boots penetrated the eight inches of snow which fell in the mountains the night before. He was careful to follow the markings on the trees for a man could easily become lost in the uncharted regions. After trudging through a small, black area where a campfire had carelessly burned out of control, he spied a perfect palm tree for his purpose. He waited, hiding himself among the tangled branches.

The hunter waited in that same place for what seemed like hours. He nearly dozed off into a peaceful sleep, but the loud crash of a fallen branch deep in the hushed forest startled him. He remembered a small flask of brandy the guys at the office had given him for being recognized as "employee of the month." Removing it from his coat pocket, he downed the entire portion of the redolent beverage. The forest trees stood as if petrified, and dusk was beginning to set in.

The hunter decided to return to his car. He failed to understand why not a single deer had roamed near his hiding place throughout the entire day. The coffee thermos and brandy flask were both dry, and he was hungry. The hunter began following the bright red markings which led to the parking lot.

Suddenly he heard the snap of a twig in the distance. He pivoted quickly and readied his gun. Darting behind a large tree only a short distance away was a brown object. Hoping to save the day from being a total loss, the hunter began to follow at a brisk pace. Scampering quietly into the woods he scanned the area in an effort to regain the sight of the brown object. The sound of footsteps running through the snow came from a cluster of pines. He again followed.

The hunter hesitated momentarily upon reaching the group of pines. If he were unable to capture the deer that he was pursuing, he thought to himself, darkness would soon set in. Without a supply of food and warmth, darkness in the mountains meant certain death to the lost sportsman. He contemplated returning to the parking lot and the safety of his Cadillac with the deerskin seat covers. He turned to end his pursuit but then thought of the disappointed faces of his children which would confront him if he returned without a trophy. The hunter again stalked the figure.

Minutes later he spied the head of the figure protruding from the trunk of a tree. The figure slipped behind a large rock, the hunter raised his weapon. The bullet pierced through the dusk with a blast that shook the entire forest. A loud cry immediately followed. It was a hit! A shot that would turn the guys at the club green with envy. His mission was done, now he would race against time and the blackness of the mountain night.

The hunter sprinted toward the rock. From behind the boulder blood was trickling and staining the pure white snow. He danced behind the rock to retrieve his prize. He reached for the carcass to sling it over his shoulder, and then stopped. In overwhelming horror, he fell backward into the snow, his mouth open and his eyes bulging with terror. Lying in the pool of blood was not the remains of a deer, but the corpse of a man.

He lay there motionless, staring at the red snow. Astonished and trembling with fear, he lapsed into an unconscious state. He was awakened by the cry of an animal in the deep forest. Shaking in confusion, the hunter went into a panic, screaming desperately for help. When no one answered, he turned to run for his car. The red markings were gone, however, and the forest was as black as ink. The temperature would dip below five degrees in the evening, and the harsh cold was beginning to bite at his wool coat.

The hunter reached for his coffee, but he had dropped the thermos in the chase. In his pocket he uncovered a small spade which he used to build campfires. He was unable to feel it with his purple fingertips. Wondering if the people back home would believe his story concerning the hunting accident, thoughts of imprisonment and punishment entered his mind. He had to conceal the evidence. He had to bury the man in the brown coat and dispose of the blood-stained snow.

His small spade sloshed through the snow and clanged at the cold ground. He repeatedly attempted to break the icy ground to no avail. Hurling the spade in disgust, he picked up the corpse of the young man and slung it over his shoulder. The hunter rushed blindly into the darkness, banging into trees and colliding with branches. He stumbled but clung tightly to the dead man in his arms. He finally fell, hitting the earth with a cold thud and dropping the hated corpse into the snow.

When the hunter awoke, dawn was breaking on the horizon. His body shuddered with the pain of frostbite. He stood and gazed at the sunrise, surveying the area. To his sudden surprise, the dead man was nowhere to be found. He panicked momentarily, for fear he might have wandered away from the place he had dropped the corpse. An imprint in the snow led to the edge of a cliff only a few feet away. To his relief the hunter surmised that the evil body had been accidentally thrown off the cliff. Although he had never adhered to religious beliefs, he thanked God for saving him from a similar fate.

The hunter then realized he was dying, although he was quite happy that the corpse had been totally disposed of. He wandered in a desperate attempt to find a tree marking which would lead him back to the warmth of his Cadillac. If he had relinquished the pursuit of the brown figure, he thought, he would be enjoying the comforts of home at this very moment. He thought of his coveted prize which would never hang over his fireplace. The dead man in the brown coat had gotten what he deserved.

Suddenly he spied a red marking on a nearby tree. He jumped for joy as the morning sun warmed his frost-bitten fingers. Galloping happily along the rows of trees sporting red markers, he could see the dim car lights in the distance. The hunter ran to the car and nestled himself into the cold, deerskin seat. He removed his spare keys from their hiding place and placed them in the ignition.

He dreamed of the hot dinner his daughter would cook for him upon his arrival. He reached for a cold cup of coffee he had saved from the day before. To his surprise, the coffee was piping hot, as hot as his wife always used to make it long ago. The hunter decided to warm his insides with the brew and forget about how the hot coffee mysteriously replaced the drink he had purchased.

Suddenly, as he raised the cup to his lips, a hand flashed out from behind him. The hand snatched the cup and poured the steaming hot coffee into the hunter's face. The hunter screamed in pain as a carving knife was slowly drawn across his throat.

And a brown figure disappeared into the forest.

Paul Masalsky '84

Quality of Life

The term "quality of life" is one that draws upon one's ideology of a paradisiacal society. A community in which life and the environment were pure and simple. A time with no economic squeezes upon the people and a time when the family was the key to society.

The ideal "quality of life" is one where young, freckled-faced children run along a dirt road in bare feet. A society with old women at the church playing Bingo every night while their husbands sit at home on the front porch smoking their pipes and telling stories from their childhood.

Tom Sawyer, by Mark Twain is a novel that illustrates the pure American way of life with its country setting, rustic language, and likeable characters. The setting of Tom Sawyer is perhaps the key to its projection as the model community. The "quality of life" then was harmonic and mellifluous with the birds chirping in the willow tree as it gently swayed in the soft, warm breeze while the sound of a rippling brook lullabies an infant to sleep in a carriage by the birdbath. Surrounded by white picket fences, the houses of Tom Sawyer stand robust and firm while the shutters can be heard creaking by the family sitting beside the fireplace in the humid summer evening. Tom Sawyer is the ideal picture of "the quality of life" I would prefer.

Today's "quality of life" is greatly deteriorating and all the attributes of it are non-existent. Ernest Hemingway, in his short story, Big Two-Hearted River, provides a degree of excellence the "quality of life" should possess—an all natural environment, with animated colors and lavish surroundings, unlike today where the drab gray color of skyscrapers cast a gloomy shadow on the persons passing by.

In Big Two-Hearted River, Nick Adams goes on a hike into "the kingdom of nature" where the colorful leaves of autumn reign over a forest of chlorophyll-green plants. The "quality of life" should be unspoiled by civilization. It should be natural and undisturbed as the forest and meadows of Big Two-Hearted River are.

The "quality of life" in Big Two-Hearted River is perfect for this idealist. The sanctity of nature is preserved while today the "hustle and bustle" of the expanding city engulfs the flawless society beyond its limits.

The "quality of life" also includes the atmospheric surroundings. The ideal "quality of life" would not consist of acid rain and a decreasing ozone layer, but air as fresh as a rose that can be inhaled without the threat of cancer-causing elements being included. Pollution would be non-existent in my "perfect" society for it mars the beauty and exquisiteness of the earth's features.

Tom Sawyer, with its horse-drawn carriages, Southern hospitality, and charm is a picturesque illustration of the "quality of life" I would prefer. If you notice, there is no threat of pollution and nuclear war in my ideal community.
